Thompson, esq., Under Secretary of State	1 enclosure Have gout; please direct to Germain the enclosed memorial (16 April 1781) from some inhabitants of Mosquito Shore. Memorial gives background to current circumstances and desire for relief for what is past, and security for future as may render the settlements on the Mosquito Shore permanent and those on the Bay of Honduras safe.

80/6, folios 21-32	34	1781 April 28/ Belvidere Bath	Mr. Robert Hodgson to Mr. William Knox	Encloses a draft of his suggestions on what might still be done with slenderer means than already thought of on the Spanish main [Nicaragua] based on experience, which would at the least call Spain off from the war [American Revolutionary War]. Begins by giving background to why his knowledge is authoritative. Before proceeding with his ideas, he details his criticisms of expedition thus far, starting with - when he arrived in Central America, a premature expedition from Jamaica had already ruined the business in a manner too shocking to be easily spoken of with temper. [Hodgson, c. 1737-1791, had been superintendent for Mosquito Shore from 1768 to 1775 when he was recalled to answer charges of misconduct. He returned in 1780 as colonel to advance British assault along the San Juan/St. John River. He was able to speak Miskitu.]

80/25, folios 194-197	252	1781 June 30/ Whitehall	Secretary of state to Governor John Dalling	Draft despatch no. 37

				 Spanish taking of Pensacola: more support from military and naval forces from Jamaica was needed earlier Praises the raising a battalion at Charles Town [Charleston, South Carolina] by Lord Montague Confirmation of Dalling's leave of absence Right decision retiring from public service considering discord preventing doing business
80/26, folios 198-199	256	1781 July 4/ Whitehall	Secretary of state to Brigadier General Campbell	 Draft despatch no. 1 Dalling's leave with regard to issues such as suspended judges lack of protection shown to Pensacola, West Florida; an important colony government should be encouraged to lay aside animosities and act unanimously recognises condition of poor health of troops stationed at Jamaica urges harmony with Peter Parker, naval commander.
80/27, folios 200-203	259	1781 July 28/ Mount Grove Hampstead	Mr. Robert White to Lord George Germaine	White: 'forlorn and destitute settlements' of Mosquito Shore. From commencement of Spanish Rupture, conceived that respectable military force should have been established on the Shore for their protection and for successful offensive. Describes three distinct periods military force needed. Black River prominent in the text. Urges more military help. Directs message to Germain as believes interests of Shore never could be felt or understood by Jamaica in any other view than as temporary and subservient to their own. Wishes for vigorous and effectual measure for erecting Shore into permanent British Colony and reasons.

80/28, folios 204-205	265	1781 August 2/ Whitehall	Secretary of state to Lieutenant Governor Campbell	 proposals regarding Artillery at Jamaica - recommended to Lord Townsend to make arrangements suggests Gov. Campbell exercises his authority to punish Brenton, the ordinance storekeeper; your commission as lt. governor gives you authority over all officers; Dalling could do same but in dismissing judges and advocate general, he did so without sufficient grounds and in refusing king's orders to restore suspended officer
80/29, folios 206-224	268	1781 May 24/ Jamaica	John Dalling, Governor of Jamaica to secretary of state	 mentions arrival of the London Fleet at Jamaica letters received from Lieutenant Colonel Bell and Captain Amherst, Charles Town [Charleston, South Carolina] transmitting: they show potential assistance from there, expect rebel prisoners more willing to be formed into corps by themselves instead of into our regular regiments large amount of military stores – obliged to hire places to lodge, appoint people to oversee care; also directed shed to be built for preservation of boats lying here as admiral says it's a treasury concern and not a navy concern arrival of funds for relief following hurricane; necessary to convene government sickly state and high mortality rate of troops in Jamaica and needed accommodation; mentions shocking state of General Garth's troops upon arrival at sickly time of year; importance of needed barracks for health of soldiers and security of island; shows concern troops sent to General Vaughan do not have same fate as those sent here • deputy adjutant general required in Jamaica for issuing my orders and regulating details of so many regiments and corps and assisting in conducting general military business; as well as deputy quarter master general from the quantity of camp equipage and stores now here • expenses incurred by expedition on Spanish mainland – various vouchers regularly transmitted to Treasury shows my attention to uniform economy • many circumstances occurred to increase expences – 1. preparations due to alarm of arrival of Count d'Estaing in our area with powerful armament in August 1779; 2. scarcity and extravagant price of military stores and provisions for expedition, and hire and value of transports many of them lost on Spanish main owing to incredible mortality of seamen and uncommon bad weather, and other on their voyage back for Jamaica perished in tempest in October; 3. Gen. Garth's troops arriving in a terrible situation requiring great number of hospitals for numerous sick and temporary barracks to be quickly erected to shelter effectives in inclement season near at hand; 4. some expense recently incurred in fortifying island of Rattan [Roatan] as an asylum for late inhabitants of Honduras
