To the King.

I. (3 Sess. A. 1797.)

ON the subject of the black troops; committee appointed to prepare it, 52; reported; committed; engrossed, 53; in which the house humbly represent to his majesty, that the measure of employing black troops, however strongly recommended by his confidential servants, appears to them fraught with destruction to his majesty's subjects of this island: Trusting that their opposition will be justified as their opinion is founded on experience; and that his majesty, from his paternal solicitude for the safety of all his subjects, will approve of the motives which influence their conduct on this momentous subject; passed, 54; message to the council, desiring their concurrence, ibid.; amendments by the council agreed to, and the address sent by a joint committee of the council and assembly, who request the lieutenant-governor to transmit it, 58.

II. (Ibid.)—On the natural increase, and moral and religious instruction, of the negroes: On a resolution of the committee on state of the island, committee appointed to prepare one, 97; thanking his majesty for directing the lieutenant-governor to recommend the subject; mentioning two acts they had passed (the duty on aged negroes, and provision for the clergy) as tending to promote the same end; requesting that the ecclesiastical jurisdiction, now vested in the bishop of London, may be placed

In his majesty's representative; assuring his majesty that they omit no occasion of meliorating the condition of the slaves; and trusting that their right to procure labourers from Africa will be preserved to them inviolate, while they preserve their allegiance; reported; committed; engrossed, 98; passed; the lieutenant-governor desired to transmit it, 99.

III. (Ibid.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, 97; setting forth, that the council and assembly humbly desire to express to his majesty their sense of the distinguished merit of Alexander earl of Balcarres, and request of his majesty to bestow on him some mark of his royal favour; reported; engrossed; passed, and sent to the council for their concurrence; agreed to; and ordered to be transmitted by the committee of correspondence to the agent, to be presented to his majesty, 100.

IV. (7 Sess. A. 1799.)—On a report of the committee on state of the colony, committee appointed to prepare one, 438; humbly submitting the dangers arising from the discussions relating to the slave-trade; their precarious situation arising from the state of affairs in St. Domingo; and their having been obliged to have recourse to martial law; assuring his majesty that they are anxious to render the situation of the slaves as comfortable as the nature of things will permit; trusting that their representation representation will be graciously considered, and procure them redress and protection; presented; reported; passed, and sent to the council, 442; agreed to by the council, and sent by a joint committee to his honour, who promised to transmit it in the most acceptable manner, 443.

V. (9 Sess. A. 1801.)—On the subject of the black troops; committee appointed to prepare it, 649; presented; reported; setting forth, that they are impelled for self-preservation to lay at the foot of the throne their humble representation of an impending evil; that the regiment of negro soldiers is incompatible with their safety, and pregnant with the most fatal calamities; that they resort to his majesty, and beseech him to remove that regiment, the removal of which can alone enable them to participate in the blessings of peace; passed, and sent to the council for their concurrence, 651; council decline concurring; message to lie on the table; resolved that the committee of correspondence do transmit it to the agent, to be laid before his majesty, in the most proper and effectual manner, 652.

To the Lieutenant-Governor.

VI. (3 Sess. A. 1797.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, in answer to his speech at the opening of the session, 3; presented; reported, ibid.; returning thanks for his lordship's speech; promising attention to the objects recommended to them; to reconsider the measure of employing black troops, to give attention to the accounts from the maroons; and to the subject on which his majesty had sent instructions; and expressing their confidence in his lordship's co-operation; passed, 5; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 6.

VII. (Ibid.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, on the subject of the black troops, 14; presented; reported, 54; in which they assure his lordship, that they have considered the measure with candour and attention; thank him for his dependence on their loyalty and attachment to the parent state; but cannot approve of a measure to destructive of colonial subordination; present another measure, which they hope will be graciously accepted by his majesty; and entreat his lordship to represent their sentiments in the most favourable manner; passed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 57.

VIII. (4 Sess. A. 1798.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, on the subject of the rebellious negroes, 106; returning thanks for his lordship's speech at opening the session; trusting that the measures already taken by his lordship will prove effectual; promising their serious consideration to the matters to be laid before them; and confiding in his honour's co-operation in the measures proper to be adopted in the present exigency; passed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; 114.

IX. (5 Sess. A. 1798.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, 126; presented, 129; read, 130; returning thanks for his speech at opening the session; expressing satisfaction at the termination of their domestic troubles; and their gratitude for his majesty's approbation of their measures respecting the clergy; promising to enter into every discussion relating to the two thousand troops; lamenting their disagreement with his majesty's ministers in regard to the maroons in North-America; engaging to provide cheerfully the supplies for government; and noticing with pleasure the manner in which their voluntary contributions have been received in England; passed; his honour appoints to be attended, 131; presented by the whole house; answer, 132.

X. (Ibid.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, on the admission of French, particularly people of colour and negroes, 215; presented; reported, 216; thanking his honour for his communication; imparting their opinion, that the introduction of more French people is highly dangerous; that even, if they were ordered to be received, a suspension of the order would be proper; that the good character of the persons does not alter the case, and his majesty can give them an asylum in other parts of his dominions; that the encouragement of French negroes in the interior is incompatible with their safety; that the asylum in Port-Royal and Kingston, allowed them by law, is sufficient; they therefore anxiously request that the laws may be put in execution; passed; report of the committee of safety ordered to be annexed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 219.

XI. (6 Sess. A. 1799.)—Committee appointed to prepare one; presented; reported, 253; thanking his lordship for his speech at opening the session; looking forward to the happy consequences from the splendid victory of lord Nelson; promising to proceed with diligence in making provision for the support of government; and agreeing in the propriety of giving encouragement to internal roads, to promote the settlement and security of the colony; passed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 254.

XII. (7 Sess. A. 1799.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, 312; received; reported; thanking his honour for his speech at opening the session; professing their readiness to attend to the public business; promising to direct their attention to measures adapted to the improvement of the colony; to provide for the exigencies of government; and assuring his honour that they are met with every disposition to proceed with temper, cordiality, and dispatch; passed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 314.

XIII. (Ibid.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, 454; received; reported, offering to sanction any measures his honour may have found it necessary to have recourse to, in the present exigency; passed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 455.

XIV. (Ibid.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, on his honour's message, respecting American intercourse, 470; received; reported, 471; returning their grateful thanks for his compliance with their request respecting certain exports in vessels belonging to the United States of America, being convinced of the indispensable necessity of the measure; passed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 472.

XV. (8 Sess. A. 1800.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, 475; received; reported, 476; returning thanks for his honour's speech at opening the session; expressing their satisfaction that his majesty has ordered out additional troops, and their approbation of those already arrived, promising to provide the supplies as far as the situation of the island will admit; and thanking his honour for his assurances of co-operation; passed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 477.

XVI. (Ibid.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, on his majesty's order in council, prohibiting the exportation of produce in American vessels, 507; received; reported, 582; setting forth, that they have seen the order with great concern, sensible of the necessity, his honour having yielded to the exigency; that they hope his honour will not consider them importunate in addressing him again, being pressed by the same circumstances; that the storm having destroyed the provisions, the necessaries of life must be procured from the United States; that they have no specie, and must pay in produce; that the articles allowed to be exported do not pay for the necessary lumber; that they are in dread for his majesty's troops, for themselves, and for their slaves; and that they submit the absolute necessity of allowing sugar and coffee to be exported in American vessels, to the extent of the necessaries of life, and while the necessity exists; passed, 584; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 585.

XVII. (9 Sess. A. 1801.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, 588; received; reported, 589; returning thanks for his honour's speech; assuring his honour of their readiness to attend to the public business; expressing their gratitude to his majesty for appointing to this government a gentleman of his distinguished character, and prefiging a happy administration, promising their co-operation in measures to remedy the sickly state of the troops, and to provide supplies consistent with the circumstances of the island, participating with every loyal subject in the pleasure felt from the splendid successes in Egypt; declaring their lively gratitude to his majesty, for the strong squadron he has sent for their protection; and, convinced that the interests of this island are inseparable from those of Great-Britain, promising to co-operate with his honour in every measure that may conduce to the general interest; passed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 590.

XVIII. (Ibid.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, 639; received; reported, ibid.; setting forth, that the assembly, ever anxious to alleviate the pressure of taxes on their constituents, beg leave to represent to his excellency, that they ought no longer to be burthened with the heavy expence of the 20th regiment of light dragoons, regular cavalry being little adapted to the defence of the island; they therefore beg his excellency will represent to his majesty's ministers their anxious desire to be relieved from the expence of this establishment; passed; his honour appoints to be attended; presented by the whole house; answer, 640.

XIX. (10 Sess. A. 1802.)—Committee appointed to prepare one, 665; received; reported, 666; returning thanks for his honour's speech at opening the session; professing their readiness, on every exigency, to sacrifice their private convenience

nience to their public duty, their persuasion that the importance of the measures to be proposed will justify his honour in calling them together at an unusual season; joining with his honour in contemplating the blessings to be expected from the return of peace, and indulging hopes of an alleviation of their oppressive burdens; promising to take the peculiar circumstances of the island into their serious consideration, and to make provi-
